THEATRICAL AND OTHERWISE.

News and Comment of Stage Matters and Other Gossip.

Creston Clarke is touring Kentucky towns in a new play called "The Ragged Earl."

Russell's Comedians will be the attraction to-night at the Grand, in a program of minstrelsy and vaudeville. The company travels in its own private sleeping car, and is endorsed by the press of many cities. Some of the performers have appeared here in the past in excellent specialties. Seats are on sale at Borland's for the performance. The company carries a band and orchestra.

"Wright's Original Nashville Students," comprising forty-five colored performers, will appear at the Grand, Tuesday night, the 21st, in a program of minstrelsy and vaudeville, giving an entertainment which lasts three hours. The Nashville Students Glee Club and Occidental Quartette will sing Southern melodies. Two bands will furnish music for the big street parade.

A novelty in way of an entertainment is "A Talent Luncheon." The guests are informed in the invitation what the features of the occasion are to be: "Miss Brown will recite, Miss Jones will sing," etc., and with this as guide every person is expected to prepare a fancy program by the exercise of some particular talent. It must be original in form, either painted, embroidered, in unique lettering, in prose, poetry, or in whatever style, skill and ability incline. After the luncheon the hostess distributes the programs, taking care that no guest gets her own. Now that progressive girls in this country cultivate one or more accomplishments, the "Talent Luncheon" is not only a merry, but exceedingly enjoyable entertainment. The programs are oftentimes lovely and artistic as well as humorous, and serve as souvenirs of the occasion.

One of the most accomplished young ladies in Bourbon has told her intimate girl friends of an amusing and peculiar incident which she experienced a short time ago. One day after washing her braid she spread her "hair" as she called it, on a hammock to dry, but when she looked for it an hour later it had disappeared. She immediately suspected a pet bull dog—probably named Mike—which she called to her. After patting him gently she said "Now, Mike, somebody has taken away my hair—and I believe you got it. I can't go to the wedding without my hair, so you go right straight and bring it to me." The dog immediately trotted over to the style, and after scratching up a peck of dirt, came back with the much wanted "hair" in his mouth, and was gently "upbraided" for playing the joke on his mistress. The "hair" was eventually put in its proper place and the young lady was one of the most attractive persons at the wedding.
